Broadway Congregational church were held Sunday morning, the Sunday school uniting with the church, march-Rev. Dr. Howe gave an address to the children from James 1:4. He said perfection might seem a large sub-ject, but it is something every child believes in. Its aim tones and braces ing into church by classes, while the tiymn, The Church's One Foundation, was being sung. The decorations con-sisted of laurei, syringa and snowballs, ject, but it is something every child believes in. Its aim tones and braces one. The highest aim is perfection of character. Thomas Arnold's definition of perfect character is the possession of right principles, of gentlemanity behavior and of intellectual training. The first is the most important. It is necessary to have God for the starting point. No man can do any good work above the level of that which he is. It also takes a true Christian man to make his manners all they should be. Courtesy is a fine art, and Christ was the first gentleman. The test of true courtesy is His own example of ministry to arranged by a committee, in charge of which was Miss Florence Stark. There were four children baptized. The following was the programme, which was well carried out. Authem, choir; Psalm 28; baptism; hymn 83; recita-tion and song, He Careth for Me, primary department; recitations, The Little Ones He Blessed, Miss Wood's class; God Have Me, Mrs. Stearns' class; responsive reading by school led by the superintendent and assist-ant. H. B. Cary and H. W. Gallup; the gentleman. The test of true courtesy is His own example of ministry to others. Intellectual training is necessary for every one who would succeed in life and such a one keeps adding to his knowledge. The essential thing is to acquire knowledge that is worth while and that really teaches something. A few great books, well studied, are sufficient for raining a liberal education. Light reading should be used for recreation merely. initials of the first words of the scrip-tural selections, spelling Children' day; offering exercise, Frank A.
